About the Course

This course includes the following topic(s): Grammar/Comp: Grade 7, Dictation: Grade 7, Composition/Written Narration: Grade 7, Copywork: Grade 7

About Grammar/Comp: Grade 7

Students spend two lessons a week reviewing the parts of speech and learning how to construct a good paragraph. During the other two lessons, students begin to expand their writing skills with composition assignments from their books. Throughout the year they explore literary concepts such as point of view and experiment with multiple forms of writing, including letters, descriptions, short accounts, and poetry.

About Dictation: Grade 7

Students use selected passages to practice dictation skills. (Alveary Copywork & Dictation Books provide selected passages).

About Copywork: Grade 7

Students copy passages from their books. (Alveary Copywork & Dictation Books provide selected passages).

Grammar/Comp: Grade 7

These lessons, combined with the writing practice students continue to gain through written narrations, reinforce concepts and build fluency with various types of written forms.

NARRATION vs. COMPOSITION

As students begin to have more formal composition assignments in addition to written narrations, it's important to consider the difference between the two. Both narrations and compositions build students' skills in writing. The focus in narrations is on building written fluency by "telling back" the reading in written/typed form (and students are free to experiment with various ways to do this or not, as interested). The focus in composition assignments is to give them accountability and structure to practice specific skills in one or more types of writing.

Sometimes this means that a composition prompt assigns a specific type of "telling back" (such as retelling a reading as a poem, which a student may or may not have already experimented with of their own accord in their narrations). Additionally, compositions move beyond narration and variations of "telling back" to assignments which ask students to direct their attention to specific ideas within or across their readings (such as comparing and contrasting characters or texts) and other types of reflection which they previously have mainly practiced discussing orally or briefly in writing after reading and narrating in their lessons. Finally, especially as students enter high school, composition assignments merge with grammar assignments to help students understand the writing process more globally and consider aspects of style, editing, revision, research, and the ethics of communication.

Written Narration: Grade 7

Students should keep track of their regular written narrations and write 6 each week.

WRITTEN NARRATION TIPS

☐ Plan to complete six written narrations every week and consider increasing to seven by the end of the year.

☐ Written narrations can happen after reading at the end of any lesson, if time allows, and do NOT need to take up an extra 10-15 minutes in your schedule. This tracker serves to help you keep records of what was done throughout the year.

☐ To keep written narrations fresh and interesting, have your student try narrating in different ways (specific suggestions are sometimes included directly in a lesson). Students are directly assigned some of these prompts in composition lessons, but they should feel free to use these as desired for their normal narrations as well. In addition to just “what did we read about?”, you can ask students to:

- “Write the story of ____.” (Example: “Write the story of the battle of Troy.”)
- “Imagine you are a character in the story and write what happened as a diary entry” (Example: pretend you are Christian in Pilgrim’s Progress and write a letter or diary entry telling what happened to him in today’s chapter.”
- Pretend they are the author of the book and have them write their narration as if they are telling the story of the chapter they read for the book’s first readers. (Then have them read it to someone who hasn’t read the book!)
- Tell back the reading as a poem, a news report or interview, a scene in a play, or a comic strip style narration combining illustration and words.

☐ Encourage students to spend a full 10-15 minutes or so on their narrations and give as much detail as possible. It may help if you encourage them to think of writing their narrations for a friend or someone who has never read the book, rather than for you, who might already know the story. If they feel like they’ve run out of things to write, have them try one of the narration variations above.

☐ Remind students that narration is a way for them to process and think more deeply about what they read. Narration isn’t about proving to you that they read a book or did an assignment, but a chance for them to actually know it and better remember it themselves.

Reminders

Written Narration: Grade 7

☐ Some ideas on supporting students who are building fluency with written narrations:

- Write down words on a whiteboard if a student wants to use a word they don’t know how to spell.
- Have students write down brief sentences (even numbered statements) telling the sequence of events, and then have them orally give more details about each of them.

- Write the beginning and then orally tell the rest, or vice versa.
 - Some students may find writing easier if you provide external supports before writing, such as index cards that can be arranged and re-ordered. You can also encourage students to talk aloud as they write or use speech-to-text and then edit.
- ☐ Make sure students are practicing typing skills regularly, and have them increasingly type more narrations and compositions as they become comfortable.

How To Teach Dictation

Prepare

Select a passage that has already been read and narrated. (We provide passages in the Dictation packets.) Have students read it over and select 5-6 words that they don't know. They can also mark punctuation that may be difficult to remember. They only need to select a section that contains 5-6 new words. If this is only a couple of sentences, that is fine.

Discuss

Ask students which words they think will be most difficult to spell and why. If there is a common spelling pattern, you can point that out. You can also point out other words that have a similar pattern.

Practice

Have students visualize the words by "seeing" them with their eyes closed. They should also practice on a whiteboard.

Complete

As part of the same lesson, when students feel ready, slowly call out a paragraph from what they studied. You will want to read it phrase by phrase and not repeat it.

View

When finished, have students look over their own work to check and see that everything looks right. If you see any misspelled words, erase those and have the students practice those again.

How To Teach Grammar

Connect

Link back to the previous lesson.

Read

Read the assigned pages and discuss new ideas. It is important for students to be able to talk about the concepts in their own words. The pictures and diagrams in the book can serve as a springboard for discussions about the grammar concepts.

Practice

Complete practice examples in the text and/or the practice book that accompany the lesson.

Observe

Observe examples of concepts in books being read and in daily life.

Spend ten minutes daily working on copywork this week. You can use this week's suggested passage or choose your own of a similar length.

WEEK 1 15m Dictation: Grade 7 - Tracker

Tracker: ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐

☐ Materials: Grade 7 Student packet of copywork and dictation passages

→ DICTATION

Two Dictation lessons are scheduled each week. In each lesson, there should be time for studying (10 minutes) and time for the sentences to be dictated (5 min). You can use this week's suggested passage for the lessons and/or choose your own generally from the history, literature, or geography books the student has already read during the week. The suggested passage might take one lesson to learn, or it might take both lessons to learn. It will be different for each student. Be sure to pay attention to any added notes regarding grammar or punctuation in the student dictation packet for the week.

The student should study enough text to include 5-6 unknown words. This might mean that the student is only studying a couple of sentences. A student may benefit more by preparing alone (practicing words and self-checking), or he/she may need heavier support by talking through the words. The student should work on visualizing each word until they can see it with their eyes shut, and then practice writing the word, drawing the letters in the air, or saying the letters aloud until it is memorized.

Discuss any interesting spelling patterns or punctuation from the text being studied. The process should take around 10 minutes to this point.

Then choose a sentence or two to slowly dictate a few words at a time to the student from the text studied. Read it once. Correct any errors and revisit any words missed.

Be sure to adapt the amount studied and dictated to suit the student. Add to or subtract from the amount or difficulty of the text studied to ensure the student's success and growth.

One purpose of composition lessons is to encourage you, the student, to dig deeper, reflect on your readings, explore the different ways words work, and learn how to ask good questions of yourself and your readings. Each week, you will write two different compositions. You can work on these in the order you choose. Set your timer and use the whole time allotted for a composition assignment.
