About the Course

This course includes the following topic(s): Canadian History: Grades 5-6, World History: Grades 4-6, Ancient History: Grades 5-6

About World History: Grades 4-6

Through the reading of history stories and biographies, students experience what life was like in different times and places. They are exposed to the everyday experiences as well as the major events from our current history cycle (1800-1900). Students will also view images, reference maps, and work on their century charts and Book of Centuries as part of their lessons.

About Ancient History: Grades 5-6

Study history stories about the ancient civilizations that lived from 100 BC to 350 AD. View images and reference atlases and maps to set the people and events in their time and place. Update History Charts and Book of Centuries as appropriate for student level.

About Canadian History: Grades 5-6

Read about Canadian history from 1800-1900 through a variety of texts: engaging narratives, history spines, primary source documents, and historical fiction. These books, which offer a range of perspectives, will immerse students in the time period and allow them to see the world through the eyes of those who lived it. Students will view images and reference atlases and maps to set the people and events in their time and place. Update History Charts and Book of Centuries as appropriate for student level.

Placement & Combining Tips

World History: Grades 4-6

This course is the same for 4th-6th graders. In grade 5, students may begin their Book of Centuries.

Canadian History: Grades 5-6

This course is the same for students in grades 5 and 6. In grade 5, students may begin their Book of Centuries. It could be easily modified for students in grade 4, if combining.

Canadian History: Grades 5-6

Joe and the Wreck of the Tribune is a historical novel that recounts the brave rescue of sailors from the HMS Tribune by a thirteen-year-old boy known only as "Joe Cracker" to history. The author Jacqueline Halsey imagines a backstory for him, and parents may wish to pre-read the reveal of Joe's parentage on pages 145-146 in advance to decide what is best for their particular student(s), especially those on the younger end of the age range. While the circumstances of Joe's birth and the small boat he later uses in his rescue both caused the fracturing of a family, Joe himself and the boat are what ultimately mend and heal the remaining family members. Some may choose to read the story aloud to edit on the fly if needed and to encourage discussion. Others will be fine with the content as is. We encourage all to provide an inviting space for students to ask questions and share thoughts as they process what they are reading in their books. There is always the option of substituting for Belle of Batoche from Grades 2-4 or Jeremy's War from Grades 7-8.

How To Teach

Prepare

- Read through the lesson and gather any materials or find any necessary links.
- If you have not already read the book, you may want to read the selected pages in advance.

Recap

- Connect to previous lessons by asking students to recall where they left off.
- If students have difficulty recalling, teachers might try showing them a picture from the reading, sharing something the teacher remembers, or prompting them with the first sentence of the last reading. This will often refresh their memory enough to allow them to recall.
- If students still cannot recall anything from the last reading, teachers might consider continuing anyway (with a shorter reading this time) or repeating the previous lesson, depending on the reading and the nature of the book.

Introduce

- Use a picture, map, or engaging question to pique the student's interest in the day's lesson.
- If necessary, you may talk about one or two unfamiliar words that will be crucial to understanding.

Read

- Read the day's passage out loud. When reading to pre-readers, point to the words as you read, even if it seems like they aren't paying attention.
- Move at the student's pace for the lesson time rather than a particular number of pages. It is vitally important that teachers not try to 'force feed' a student more than they can consume in one sitting.
- Students who have a difficult time sitting still or listening may benefit from a fidget of their choice, such as a piece of putty or clay or an afghan; flexible positioning, such as a wobble seat or inverted sitting; or sensory modulation, such as a weighted vest or blanket or adjustment of light, temperature, or sound.

Narrate

- Have students retell the passage orally.
- Alternatively, learners may use words, pictures, Legos, dolls, etc., to process and convey ideas in the manner most natural to them.
- Teachers may take turns to model.
- Narration is a complex skill requiring the coordination of several parts of the brain. If a student struggles to narrate in general, with a specific subject or book, or on one day but not others, then this is an opportunity to learn. Observe when they struggle with this or any other activity today. Notice facial expressions and body language; listen to what they say about why it is hard or how they feel about it. Take note of these observations for later, tell them that you see how hard they are working, and then offer whatever support they need to end on a positive note. If necessary, take a break for the day.

Discuss

- Give the student an opportunity to share thoughts on the lesson and any connections made.
- To stimulate discussion, you could ask them what they thought about the passage or ask an open-ended question.

WEEK 1 25m Canadian History: Grades 5-6 - Lesson 1

Joe and the Wreck of the Tribune

Materials: Joe and the Wreck of the Tribune; Canadian Student Atlas or map of Nova Scotia

→ INTRO

The years 1800-1900 were a momentous century for the history of Canada. It saw wars, rebellions, large waves of immigration, new and expanded settlements, exploration to the west and north, and Canada's Confederation of 1867, with more provinces and territories joining in the decades that followed. This course uses the narrative history The Story of Canada to provide an overview of the major events of the years 1800-1900, and a historical novel, a picture book, and a graphic novel to immerse students in three distinct moments in time: life in a fishing village on Nova Scotia's Chebucto Peninsula at the turn of the century, the life of Tecumseh, a Shawnee chief and British army ally in the War of 1812, and the Confederation Conferences of 1864, where the wheels of Canada's Confederacy were set in motion.

The first book, Joe and the Wreck of the Tribune, tells the story of a thirteen-year-old boy who risked his life to save drowning sailors from the wreck of the H.M.S. Tribune, off the coast of Nova Scotia. This historical fiction novel imagines a backstory for the boy only known to history as "Joe Cracker," and it paints a detailed picture of what life was like in a small fishing village around 1800.

WEEK 1 25m World History: Grades 4-6 - Lesson 1

The Slave Auction, A Letter from a Schoolboy

Materials: William Wilberforce: The Freedom Fighter

→ INTRO

This book is about an Englishman named William Wilberforce (1759-1833) who was a member of Parliament, the lawmaking group in the government of Great Britain. The English had been part of the slave trade since 1662. In 1770, out of a total of one hundred thousand slaves a year from West Africa, British ships transported more than half. English considered the slave trade inseparably linked with the wealth and national security of Great Britain. William worked tirelessly in Parliament to change the laws and abolish or get rid of the slave trade. As we learn about this remarkable man, we will also learn about what life was like in the late 1700s and early 1800s, what people were thinking or talking

The Bronze Bow, winner of the 1962 Newbery Medal, is set in Galilee during the time of Jesus's ministry (approximately 28–33 AD). Galilee had been occupied by Rome for almost 100 years when the story takes place, and the people longed for freedom from Roman oppression. As we read the story, we'll explore both the Galilee region and the culture of Rome during this time period.

When someone says they want to enter public service for their career, what do they mean? It usually means they want to get involved in government. It is important to know a little about the government of the United Kingdom (England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland) since our book takes place in England. Parliament is the legislature or lawmaking group. The government leader, called the prime minister, is always a member of Parliament. This makes Britain different from the United States, which keeps Congress and the president in separate branches of government. Parliament is made up of two houses: the House of Lords and the House of Commons. You will read about William's entrance into public service.

mandated protections for indentured Hebrew servants, Amalek treated Daniel cruelly. Unable to endure the abuse, Daniel broke his bond and fled into the mountains, making him a runaway and a fugitive from justice.

Daniel's grandmother mentions a "pauper's share" of grain in this chapter. This ancient practice was called gleaning. Landowners were to leave the edges of their fields unharvested so that the poor and widows could gather the grain to feed themselves. This wasn't easy - it took a lot of work to gather the grain, separate it, grind it, and turn it into coarse flour to make bread! Do you remember any Bible stories that mention gleaning?

- Why did the people in Capernaum act differently toward the Roman soldiers than Daniel did? Was one right or wrong?
- How does Hezron's approach to the Roman occupation differ from the Zealots'? Which do you think is wiser?

→ BACKGROUND

In this chapter, Daniel travels to the city of Capernaum. Nestled on the northern shore of the Sea of Galilee, Capernaum was a prosperous fishing village and busy hub of daily life in first-century Galilee. Its rich waters and location along major trade routes made it a natural gathering place. It was also the home base of Jesus during his years of ministry.

Also mentioned in this chapter, Tiberias was built around 20 AD by Herod Antipas and named for the reigning Roman Emperor. Situated along the western shore of the Sea of Galilee near 17 natural hot springs, it served as the Roman capital of Galilee and was meant to show off Roman life. Its construction over an ancient cemetery made it ritually unclean under Jewish law. This initially kept observant Jews away, though it later became a major center of Jewish scholarship.

The year is now 1805. The French Revolution that threw down the monarchy was over. A man named Napoleon Bonaparte had risen to power in France. To the troops he commanded in battle, Napoleon was known fondly as the "Little Corporal." To the monarchs and kings whose thrones he overthrew, he was "that Corsican ogre." Some believed him to be a great reformer. Others thought him a monster. Friend and foe alike, however, could agree on one fact: "Napoleon I, emperor of France and for 16 years master of most of Europe, was one of the greatest military geniuses of all time" (from Britannica Kids). When you think of Ireland, what comes to mind? Perhaps the story of St. Patrick. Ireland is often called the Emerald Isle because of its lush greenery. It is considered an enchanting place to visit.

∞ Image Link: The Cliffs of Moher

However, in the 1840s, tragedy struck Ireland that changed it forever. There was a terrible famine, and many people either died or left the country to go to America. Today, one-sixth of US citizens (43 million) identify their national background as Irish. What was it like to live in Ireland at this time? This book is a fictional account of an Irish family during that time and what they did to survive. It is hard to read about such a sad time in history and all the suffering that happened, but we also read about those who persevered and had hope for a brighter future. The author is from Ireland and has sequels to this book if you want to read more. Let's first learn about the geography of Ireland.

Here is a little more background information about the potato disease or blight. "Almost overnight, healthy green fields of potatoes turned black. Prior to the blight, many Irish families relied on potatoes as their primary food source. The average man ate 14 pounds of potatoes a day. Mixed with buttermilk, potatoes provided a nutritious diet for hard-working laborers. Ireland was unprepared for the recurring failure of the potato crop in the years 1845–1849. As it turned out, the crop failure was due to a fungus that was unknown at the time, which is now believed to have been Phytophthora infestans. Approximately 40 percent of the crop was lost in 1845; however, it did not lead to famine, as surplus from the previous year sustained the population along with some government relief. The next year's harvest was expected to be healthy and plentiful. However, in 1846, the blight returned to the potato crop in Ireland, and relief from the government in England was slow and inadequate. Soon disease and death spread across the country" (From Great Hunger Museum).

The potato plant grows underground. Potatoes are grown by planting seed potatoes—sprouted chunks of old potatoes—which form multiple new tubers underground, typically five to six per seed piece. Workhouses were built by the government before the famine as places of refuge for those who were unable to support themselves, often due to extreme poverty. A typical day inside a workhouse was to rise at 6 am, breakfast at 6.30 am, work until 12 noon, lunch break, and then work until 6 pm. Supper was served at 7 pm, with lights out at 8 pm. Husbands, wives, and children were separated as they entered the workhouse and could be punished if they attempted to speak to each other. An inmate's only possessions were his/her uniform, mattress, and blanket. Once a week, the inmates bathed, and the men shaved. The conditions were unsanitary, and the conditions were harsh because they didn't want people to go to the workhouses unless it was the last resort. However, during the famine, more and more people had no other choice.

likely originated in the Andes Mountains of Peru, South America. In the early 1500s, Spanish conquerors found the Incas growing the vegetable, which the Spanish called patata. They were taken back to Europe and eventually reached England, where the name changed to potato. About 1590, potatoes were introduced to Ireland, where farmers quickly discovered they thrived in their country's cool, moist soil with very little labor. An acre of fertilized potato field could yield up to 12 tons of potatoes, enough to feed a family of six for a year, with leftovers going to the family's animals. By the 1800s, the potato had become the staple crop in the poorest regions. More than three million Irish peasants subsisted solely on the vegetable, which is rich in protein, carbohydrates, minerals, and vitamins such as riboflavin, niacin, and Vitamin C. Irish peasants were actually healthier than peasants in England or Europe, where bread, far less nutritious, was the staple food" (from historyplace.com). Although the potato crop failed, some farmers in Ireland were still growing wheat, oats, barley, and other crops that were exported to England. That is why many Irish people blamed England for not helping them as much as they could have. You will read more about that in today's reading.

- Why do Daniel and Joel believe Jesus may be the leader they are looking for rather than Rosh?

→ BACKGROUND

This chapter takes place in the month of Tishri, which is in September / October. The Day of Atonement is also included in this chapter. Yom Kippur, known as the Day of Atonement, holds the highest place on the Jewish calendar. Observed on the 10th of Tishri, the day is marked by fasting, reflection, and coming before God to ask for forgiveness. Though the tone is serious and solemn, there is hope as well. This is a time the slate can be wiped clean of sin for a fresh start.

Materials: The Story of Canada; map or atlas of Canada that includes Manitoba

→ INTRO

While the War of 1812 was at its height in Upper and Lower Canada to the east, a Scottish nobleman named Thomas Douglas, 5th Earl of Selkirk, was working to establish a colony on the prairies to the west, at the intersection of the Red and Assiniboine Rivers, near what is now Winnipeg. Selkirk had received a large grant of land from the Hudson Bay Company and wanted to create a farming community to support many poor Scottish highlanders and Irish peasants, who had lost their homes and livelihoods due to various upheavals at the end of the eighteenth

While many people stayed in Ireland hoping for an end to the famine, millions of people emigrated (to leave one's country to live elsewhere) to other places. Between 1845 and 1855, nearly 2 million people emigrated from Ireland to America and Australia, and another 750,000 to Britain. The Poor Law Extension Act, which made landlords responsible for the maintenance of their own poor, urged the landlords to pay for their tenants to leave the country. However, emigrating was not an easy solution. Ships were overcrowded, and many people died before reaching their new home. Disease spread quickly on board because people were packed in so close together. These ships became known as "coffin ships" because so many people died aboard them.

When Jesus began his ministry in Judea, everything he taught went against the way Rome operated. Rome was built on military power, conquest, and crushing its enemies, but Jesus taught something radically different. Roman leaders saw Christians as troublemakers and had many of them arrested or killed. But the faith Jesus started kept spreading anyway, moving from person to person and town to town across the empire. After about 300 years, something remarkable happens. You will read about that in the next book when you learn about the Roman Emperor Constantine.

→ INTRO

This is a non-fiction book that tells the story of how U.S. Navy ships headed by Commodore Matthew Perry sailed to Japan in 1853 to bring a letter from President Fillmore asking Japan to open its ports to trading with the U.S. Other attempts had been tried before but were unsuccessful. Due to policies in Japan, it had remained isolated from most other countries for hundreds of years. Imagine you are living in your small fishing village of Shimoda and have never met anyone from another country. You see four huge ships approaching. That is what it was like for the people on that day in July 8, 1853. Let's first learn about the geography of Japan.

→ MAP QUESTIONS

Map Resource: Student World Atlas p.30-31, 92-93

1. On which continent is Japan found? [A: Asia]
2. How would you get from the U.S. to Japan in a ship if you were going to leave from the East Coast? [A: Sail east across the Atlantic Ocean, around the southern tip of Africa, and across the Indian Ocean and western Pacific in between Sumatra and Malaysia]
3. Which countries are closest to Japan? [A: North and South Korea, Russia, China]
4. Is Japan north or south of the equator? [A: north]
5. What is the capital of Japan? [A: Tokyo]
6. Turn to p.92-93. How many main islands is Japan made up of? [A: 4] Name them. [A: Hokkaido, Honshu, Shikoku, Kyushu] There are also nearly 4,000 smaller islands!
7. Which island is the largest? [A: Honshu]
8. What bodies of water surround Japan? [A: the Pacific Ocean, Sea of Japan / East Sea, East China Sea, Sea of Okhotsk]
9. What physical features cover much of Japan? [A: Almost four-fifths of Japan is covered with mountains.]
10. Why might Japan's island location have helped protect it from invasions?

At this time, it was the policy of the Roman government not to seek out Christians, but still to punish them when they were brought before the authorities. "Once accused and brought before the authorities, Christians had to be forced to worship the gods of the empire, or face punishment... Since great festivities were being planned in Rome in celebration of a military victory, Ignatius was sent to the capital so that his death might provide entertainment for the people. On his way to martyrdom, he wrote seven letters that are among the most valuable documents informing our knowledge of early Christianity" (Justo Gonzalez, The Story of Christianity).

We will read about another bishop and martyr of the second century. His name was Polycarp, which means 'much fruit' in Greek. Many years earlier than when this account takes place, Ignatius of Antioch had advised young Bishop Polycarp regarding his duties as bishop and the need to be firm in his faith. You may remember that Ignatius wrote 7 letters on his way to Rome. One of those letters was to Polycarp. We will read how Polycarp showed himself a worthy recipient of Ignatius's advice and a follower of his example.

Cyprian was the bishop of the church in Carthage from 248 to 258 AD. His writings and teachers have been beneficial to Christians. He helped Christians navigate the question: Do we let people who denied Christ under the threat of torture and death back into the church if they repent?

→ BACKGROUND

In AD 250, the most violent persecution the church had yet faced was instigated by the emperor Decius (249–51). Decius was determined to have no nonsense from Christians. In his eyes, they were enemies of the empire. Their atheism was responsible for the many troubles in the realm. Thus, Decius commanded all citizens of the empire to sacrifice to the traditional Roman gods. Those who did so were given certificates (libelli in Latin) as evidence that they had obeyed the order. Those who refused to comply and were unable (or unwilling) to obtain false libelli from

This is a mosaic that is on the wall in a church in Ravenna, Italy, that was constructed in the 6th century. A mosaic is a pattern or image made of small, regular, or irregular pieces of colored stone or glass held in place by plaster and covering a surface. Mosaics are often used as floor and wall decoration, and were particularly popular in the ancient Roman world. On this wall is a procession of martyrs walking from the king's palace towards Christ's throne in heaven. In the other image, you can see the inside of the church. Polycarp was also represented in this mosaic.

Athanasius is an important person from church history who lived from 293-373 in Alexandria, Egypt, which was part of the Roman Empire. He is known as the Father of Orthodoxy. Do you know what orthodoxy means? It comes from two Greek words. Orthos means right, true, and straight. Doxa means opinion. It refers to true religious beliefs. Athanasius helped Christians understand that Jesus is fully God and fully man. At that time, there was a man named Arius who argued that the Father alone was truly God and that the Son was the first and greatest creature made by the Father. That is not biblical. Athanasius defended the truth even when it was hard. What would it mean if Jesus were not truly God?
