About the Course

Accessible texts such as Charlotte's Web help students grow the delight of reading for themselves.

This topic is included in the following course(s): Literature: Grade 3

Placement & Combining Tips

Selections in General Literature are chosen to allow students to begin taking turns reading with their teacher and/or entirely by themselves (depending on reading level). If combining with younger students, make sure emerging readers still have space to practice reading somewhere in their lessons.

Literature: Grade 3

☐ Grade 3 should write a narration every couple of weeks from the term's reading, or write a part and tell the rest. The video "Tips for Transitioning from Oral to Written Narration" can be found in the Quick Links. As indicated in the video, students who are not yet secure with penmanship are not yet ready for written narration. In these cases, students may continue with oral and/or illustrated narrations only. Continue penmanship, but instead of written narrations, use the time to have students work on skills that will better support their development, such as climbing on trees or playground equipment, doing household chores, working with clay or dough, and doing mazes and dot-to-dot activities.

☐ As desired, plan for a read-aloud time. Suggestions are provided in the Community Read Aloud Quick Link, but local favorites are highly recommended whenever possible.

Term Prep & Teacher Tips

General Lit.: Grade 3

Term 3 (Heart of a Samurai): You have a few options for how to read this book. If you follow the page numbers listed in the lesson plan, you will finish parts one and two of the book (out of five). Scheduling this book in term three means students have the rest of the summer to finish the book if they would like to. However, reading pace can vary greatly at this age (or if being read aloud), and it's also fine to set a timer for 10-15 minutes of reading (allowing a few minutes for a verbal narration).

Homeschool families may choose to listen to this book on audiobook in the afternoons or in the car, which may help you finish the book during the term. If you choose this option, listen to 3-4 chapters per week to finish the book. Another option is to read a chapter or two a few afternoons/evenings a week if you'd like to finish the book during the term. Co-ops may want to assign a few chapters for home and then narrate and discuss the book during school hours. Any of these options is fine, and it's also ok if you don't finish the book, although we think you will want to—it's a fascinating story!

How To Teach

Prepare

- Read through the lesson and gather any materials or find any necessary links.
- If you have not already read the book, you may want to read the selected pages in advance.

Recap

- Connect back to the previous lesson. Ask students to give a summary of what they remember. (Full narration is not necessary.)
- If students have difficulty recalling, teachers might try showing them a picture from the reading, sharing something that the teacher remembers, or prompting them with the first sentence of the last reading. This will often refresh their memory enough to allow them to recall.
- If students still cannot recall anything from the last reading, then teachers might consider continuing anyway (with a shorter reading this time) or repeating the last lesson, depending on the reading and the nature of the book.

Introduce

- Optional: use a picture, map, or engaging question to pique the student's interest in the day's lesson.
- If necessary, you may talk about one or two unfamiliar words that will be crucial to understanding.

Read

- Read the day's passage out loud. When reading to pre-readers, point to the words as you read, even if it seems like they aren't paying attention.
- Move at the student's pace for the lesson time rather than a particular number of pages. It is vitally important that teachers not try to 'force feed' a student more than they can consume in one sitting.
- Students who have a difficult time sitting still or listening may benefit from a fidget of their choice, such as a piece of putty or clay or an afghan; flexible positioning, such as a wobble seat or inverted sitting; or sensory modulation, such as a weighted vest or blanket or adjustment of light, temperature, or sound.

Narrate

- Have students retell the passage orally.
- Alternatively, learners may use words, pictures, Legos, dolls, etc., to process and convey ideas in the manner most natural to them.
- Teachers may take turns to model.
- Narration is a complex skill requiring the coordination of several parts of the brain. If a student struggles to narrate in general, with a specific subject or book, or on one day but not others, then this is an opportunity to learn. Observe when they struggle with this or any other activity today. Notice facial expressions and body language; listen to what they say about why it is hard or how they feel about it. Take note of these observations for later, tell them that you see how hard they are working, and then offer whatever support they need to end on a positive note. If necessary, take a break for the day.

Discuss

- Give the student an opportunity to share thoughts on the lesson and any connections made.
- To stimulate discussion, you could ask them what they thought about the passage or ask an open-ended question.
