

Grammar/Comp

About the Course

Students spend two lessons each week deepening their understanding of the parts of speech. During the other two lessons, students grow their writing skills with composition assignments from their books. Throughout the year they explore literary concepts such as point of view and experiment with multiple forms of writing, including letters, descriptions, short accounts, and poetry.

This topic is included in the following course(s): Language Study: Grade 8

Grammar/Comp: Grade 8

These lessons, combined with the writing practice students continue to gain through written narrations, reinforce concepts and build fluency with various types of written forms.

NARRATION vs. COMPOSITION

As students begin to have more formal composition assignments in addition to written narrations, it's important to consider the difference between the two. Both narrations and compositions build students' skills in writing. The focus in narrations is on building written fluency by "telling back" the reading in written/typed form (and students are free to experiment with various ways to do this or not, as interested). The focus in composition assignments is to give them accountability and structure to practice specific skills in one or more types of writing.

Sometimes this means that a composition prompt assigns a specific type of "telling back" (such as retelling a reading as a poem, which a student may or may not have already experimented with of their own accord in their narrations). Additionally, compositions move beyond narration and variations of "telling back" to assignments which ask students to direct their attention to specific ideas within or across their readings (such as comparing and contrasting characters or texts) and other types of reflection which they previously have mainly practiced discussing orally or briefly in writing after reading and narrating in their lessons. Finally, especially as students enter high school, composition assignments merge with grammar assignments to help students understand the writing process more globally and consider aspects of style, editing, revision, research, and the ethics of communication.

Placement & Combining Tips

If your student did not do Paragraph Town last year, you should incorporate that book with the 8th-grade grammar book.

How To Teach Grammar

Connect

Link back to the previous lesson.

Read

Read the assigned pages and discuss new ideas. It is important for students to be able to talk about the concepts in their own words. The pictures and diagrams in the book can serve as a springboard for discussions about the grammar concepts.

Practice

Complete practice examples in the text and/or the practice book that accompany the lesson.

Observe

Observe examples of concepts in books being read and in daily life.

Term 1

WEEK 1 20m Grammar/Comp: Grade 8 - Lesson 1

→ NOTE TO STUDENTS

One purpose of composition lessons is to encourage you, the student, to dig deeper, reflect on your readings, explore the different ways words work, and learn how to ask good questions of yourself and your readings. Set your timer and use the whole time allotted for a composition assignment. If you finish an assignment with extra time, explore another perspective, ask further questions, or take a bit more time to see if any other thoughts come to mind. Alternatively, if you find yourself stuck, you may want to take a short break and come back later! Growth, not frustration, is the goal.

→ 15M COMPOSITION ASSIGNMENT #1 - SUMMARY/REFLECTION

Write a brief summary of a current event.

OR

Tell of a time when your desire for society was met. How did that experience impact/affect you?

→ 15M COMPOSITION ASSIGNMENT #2 - LETTER

Write a letter to a family member, friend, or imaginary character about one of your favorite books so far this year. Tell them what you think the book is about and why you like it so far, and then send the letter if you like!

★ TEACHER TIP

Make sure students are practicing typing skills and typing narrations and compositions regularly.

There are two designated lessons each week to work on the Composition prompts. All prompts will be listed in those lessons, so students can choose which prompts to work on.

Show sympathy to someone you know by writing them a letter and sharing your interest in music, poetry, art, or anything that gives you joy.

→ 15M COMPOSITION ASSIGNMENT #2- REVISION

Revision and editing is an important aspect of writing, especially when sharing it with others.

Choose a narration or composition assignment from last term that is about a page long. As you read, use different colored pencils to underline sentences by topic. Did you write a separate paragraph for each topic? If not, type a second draft. Ensure each paragraph only deals with one topic, and the sentences follow a logical order.

→ 15M COMPOSITION ASSIGNMENT #1- EDITING

Reread your second narration draft from last week. What you did is called "revision," because you are revising content. The next thing to do is to edit. When we edit, we look for sentence structure, misplaced modifiers, subject-verb disagreement, wordiness, spelling, weak words, etc. Write a third draft to correct mistakes and make each word pack a punch.

★ TEACHER TIP

Some students may find it helpful to use external supports before writing, such as index cards that can be arranged and re-ordered. You can also encourage students

Compare with your first draft. Which is better? Why?

Remember: All good writers revise and edit their work. It's a good thing to improve your writing and to find and fix errors! Very few people write perfect sentences the first time they put their ideas on paper (or type them).

→ 15M COMPOSITION ASSIGNMENT #2 - PERSONIFICATION

You might have noticed that Benjamin Franklin's "wit and wisdom" in Poetry Reading is filled with personification. An author uses personification when s/he gives an inanimate object or abstract idea the qualities of a person. For instance, here is one of Franklin's aphorisms:

"Anger and Folly walk cheek by-jole;
Repentance treads on both their Heels."

Notice how Franklin gives Anger, Folly, and Repentance human-like qualities. They are all walking! Look for more instances of personification in the books you read. With the remaining time, try writing a few sentences like Franklin's using personification. For instance, start by trying to write the opposite of Franklin's saying!

→ 15M COMPOSITION ASSIGNMENT #1- SCENE

Turn the first part of Gold Mountain, Elijah of Buxton, The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County, or another book of your choice into a scene for a play! Look at one of Shakespeare's plays to see how to set up your scene. Remember that plays essentially rely on dialogue and stage directions to work. So it may even help to try acting it out or imagining how you'd set it up in a room first. Feel free to look back at your books and use excerpts of dialogue from the book as you work on your scene.

→ 15M COMPOSITION ASSIGNMENT #2 - QUESTIONS

Continue working on your scene for a play.

OR

Write as many questions as you can about one of your readings. We can use the same questions for books that you might use for nature study to make observations about books and generate more questions: "What do you notice?" "What do you wonder?" and "What does it remind you of?" Don't worry if you think of a lot of questions and then draw a blank. Give yourself some time and keep thinking, and you'll probably come up with some new questions!

★ TEACHER TIP

Some students may find it helpful to use external supports before writing, such as index cards that can be arranged and re-ordered. You can also encourage students to talk aloud as they write or use speech-to-text and then edit.

Last year in Paragraph Town, you learned about descriptive paragraphs. It is a paragraph where you describe what something looks like so the reader can imagine it. It might be a place, a scene, or the way a person looks. You write the concrete details you want the reader to imagine. Think about something you want to describe. It can be something you see outside or on a walk you took in nature. You can also pick a place, scene, or person you read about in history, geography, literature, or Bible. Spend the rest of your lesson time writing your paragraph, and you can finish and revise your draft in the next lesson.

→ WRITE

Poets have used historical texts like William Bradford's History of Plimoth Plantation, newspapers, novels, and more to create found poems. The act of rearranging words, pulling words from different places together, and thinking about key images in a text is essentially a way to think more deeply about what you have read. For this assignment, just pick one passage from one of your favorite books as your source text. Use Little Women/Sir Gibbie if there isn't another book that comes to mind.

- Decide your selected passage (keep it short - no more than 1-2 pages).
- Highlight words or phrases you particularly like and/or which seem particularly important to the passage.
- Type or write those words on a separate piece of paper and use them to write a poem.
- You may choose whether to limit yourself to ONLY words found in your text or whether you want to add some of your own words as well.

→ 15M COMPOSITION ASSIGNMENT #2 - FOUND VERSE CONSTRUCTION

Continue with your found verse project today, either by hand or online, by taking the words and phrases you underlined or highlighted and putting them onto a separate piece of paper or a separate Google Doc. Play with the words to make your own found verse version of the passage you chose. Experiment with different line breaks and feel free to get rid of a phrase you had initially underlined or add a new one in. Read your work aloud to check if it flows logically and makes sense. Then read it to someone else and see what they think!
