How To Teach

Prepare

- Read through the lesson and gather any materials or find any necessary links.
- If you have not already read the book, you may want to read the selected pages in advance.

Recap

- Connect to previous lessons by asking students to recall where they left off.
- If students have difficulty recalling, teachers might try showing them a picture from the reading, sharing something the teacher remembers, or prompting them with the first sentence of the last reading. This will often refresh their memory enough to allow them to recall.
- If students still cannot recall anything from the last reading, teachers might consider continuing anyway (with a shorter reading this time) or repeating the previous lesson, depending on the reading and the nature of the book.

Introduce

- Use a picture, map, or engaging question to pique the student's interest in the day's lesson.
- If necessary, you may talk about one or two unfamiliar words that will be crucial to understanding.

Read

- Read the day's passage out loud. When reading to pre-readers, point to the words as you read, even if it seems like they aren't paying attention.
- Move at the student's pace for the lesson time rather than a particular number of pages. It is vitally important that teachers not try to 'force feed' a student more than they can consume in one sitting.
- Students who have a difficult time sitting still or listening may benefit from a fidget of their choice, such as a piece of putty or clay or an afghan; flexible positioning, such as a wobble seat or inverted sitting; or sensory modulation, such as a weighted vest or blanket or adjustment of light, temperature, or sound.

Narrate

- Have students retell the passage orally.
- Alternatively, learners may use words, pictures, Legos, dolls, etc., to process and convey ideas in the manner most natural to them.
- Teachers may take turns to model.
- Narration is a complex skill requiring the coordination of several parts of the brain. If a student struggles to narrate in general, with a specific subject or book, or on one day but not others, then this is an opportunity to learn. Observe when they struggle with this or any other activity today. Notice facial expressions and body language; listen to what they say about why it is hard or how they feel about it. Take note of these observations for later, tell them that you see how hard they are working, and then offer whatever support they need to end on a positive note. If necessary, take a break for the day.

Discuss

- Give the student an opportunity to share thoughts on the lesson and any connections made.
- To stimulate discussion, you could ask them what they thought about the passage or ask an open-ended question.

This book is based on the life of a woman who was a member of the Hidatsa people who lived in the Great Plains of North Dakota. Her name was Waheenee-wea, known as Buffalo Bird Woman, and she lived from 1839-1932. In the early 1900's a man named Gilbert Wilson visited the reservation that Buffalo Bird Woman lived at to write a book about her and tell the stories of the Hidatsa way of life that no longer existed. Her stories were written in two different books. The author of this book took those stories to create a book for children so they can learn what life was like for that tribe in the 1800s.

By the late 1800s, the way of life for the Hidatsa and other tribes across the United States, changed forever. They were forced to live on designated lands called reservations. There are approximately 326 Indian land areas in the U.S. administered as federal Indian reservations. The largest is the 16 million-acre Navajo Nation Reservation located in Arizona, New Mexico, and Utah. The smallest is a 1.32-acre parcel in California where the Pit River Tribe's cemetery is located. Many of the smaller reservations are less than 1,000 acres. WEEK 8 20m History: Grades 2-3 (U.S.)- Lesson 32

📄 Materials: Dandelions

→ INTRO

In the 1800s many people decided to head west and begin a new life. They put all their belongings in a covered wagon, known as a prairie schooner ready for adventure. This book tells you about Zoe and her family as they head out west. Imagine what life was like for people at that time. Even though things were very different, they still had the same desires as anyone—freedom, success, and happiness.

→ LOCATE

1.p.84-85 Find Illinois. That is where Zoe and her family came from.
2.Now find Nebraska. During the time of the story it was not yet a state; it was a territory. That is where they were going. It might not seem that far to us, but when you are riding in a wagon and there are no paved roads, it is a hard journey.

→ READ, NARRATE, & DISCUSS

p.1-14

- Why do you think Papa seemed excited when they reached their land, but Mama seemed sad?

∞ Image Link: Sod house

How was a sod house built? Many of the pioneer settlers made large, heavy bricks of layers of sod. One brick could weigh about 50 pounds.They were about two feet long. The bricks blended together and formed sturdy walls. But these houses' walls curved instead of being straight up and down. Like an igloo made of snow bricks, sod houses were a bit wider at the bottom so they could hold all the weight of the bricks. Building a house from sod bricks was hard work and time consuming, but it didn't cost anything. (from wildercompanion.com)
