Canadian History: Grades 11-12

How To Approach

Recap

- Take a second to recall what you read previously in the same book or topic.
- If the previous passage is difficult to remember, try looking back at any chapter/section headings or illustrations or reading the first paragraph to jog the memory.

Read

- Read the selection assigned OR read for the number of minutes allocated, leaving time for narration and mapwork. Use whichever guide (i.e., pages or minutes) works best for you. You want to read enough to be interesting, but not so much that you feel overwhelmed.
- If a book is challenging for you as a student, try stopping to narrate to yourself silently for a minute every now and then to make sure you are tracking. You might also want to read aloud to yourself. Or you might want to listen to an audiobook version of the text and read along with it.
- If a book is an easy read, enjoy the ride!
- Keep an eye out for quotes to put in your commonplace book or events or characters to put down in your Book of Centuries.

Narrate

- Process and integrate your reading by narrating either orally or in writing. Some lesson plans will give you a suggestion of how best to narrate.
- To keep yourself on track, you might want to set a timer, so you stop reading with enough time to narrate.

Connect

- After your narration, think about how what you read connects to other subjects, other books, and other things you've read, watched, or seen in the past or present.
- Share any ideas that are particularly interesting to you with your fellow classmates, teachers, parents, friends, or others. You might even want to do a bit more reading or research on something on your own time in the afternoon or evenings.

Teacher Note

These lessons are written directly to the student, but to assist them throughout the year, please read through this section and the lesson plans so you are familiar with the instructions and flow of the lessons. Accountability components are added to facilitate teacher/student discussion and growing independence.

Those educating at home might pick one or two history lessons to read aloud with their students to keep up the habit of oral narration and foster conversation and relationship, and then simply give students these lesson plans and the rest of the books and check in with them throughout the term for conversation, support, and accountability.

It is valuable for those in a classroom setting to also have a mix of lessons that students complete themselves silently and others read aloud and narrated together. Classroom settings lend themselves well to additional discussion and sharing at the end of lessons, after everyone has narrated either together or independently in writing.

Introduction

 Materials: A History of Canada in Ten Maps

✂ GATHER SUPPLIES: You will need a notebook for Canadian history where you will be writing and drawing. We recommend dot grid and blank notebooks, but any kind will do.

PREP: Print a copy of the blank map of Canada without borders. You can use this together with your notebook to mark places and chart routes throughout this course.

→ INTRO

In this course, we will learn about the history of Canada between 1800-1900. The five books are intended to work together to give a chronological overview of this historical period. The nineteenth century opened with

Many of the readings for Canadian History this year describe different kinds of encounters: between Indigenous peoples and European explorers and settlers, between explorers and uncharted areas of North America, between the French and the English, and between the British and Americans.

→ DISCUSS

What do you remember about Canadian History before 1800? What do you already know about the period between 1800-1900? Jot down a few notes for yourself of any people, places, or events that you think might be relevant. Also, write down any questions you might have about this period of Canadian history.

→ READ

p.1-19 "Geographers. . .crowd into the edges"- "is an epic one."

→ NARRATE

Narrate in a way that helps you interact with the ideas in the reading. For some, that might be narrating orally or silently to yourself, in writing, by drawing a map, a diagram or a picture, writing a diary/letter from the point of view of one of the characters, describing what happened, or writing a bulleted list of points and questions. For others, it might be helpful to make marks in the book as you read and then narrate as you look at what you marked in the chapter. Experiment and see what works well for you, and you can vary your approach week to week. Also, strive to make connections to ideas, events, and people you have come across in previous readings you have done.

• EXTRA HELPING

If you would like to watch a linear, narrative recounting of the historical events of 1800-1900 to supplement your studies this term, look for episodes of CBC's Canada: A People's History (2000-2001) at your local library or online. The following episodes cover the period of our history rotation this year:

Episode 5: A Question of Loyalties (1775-1815)

Episode 6: The Pathfinders (1670-1850)

Episode 7: Rebellion and Reform (1815-1850)

Episode 8: The Great Enterprise (1850-1867)

Episode 9: From Sea to Sea (1867-1873)

Episode 10: Taking the West (1873-1896)
