Poetry Reading

About the Course

This course includes the following topic(s): Poetry Study: Grade 7, Poetry Reading: Grade 7

About Poetry Study: Grade 7

Students study poetic devices and forms and practice writing poetry themselves.

About Poetry Reading: Grade 7

Students continue to develop their relationship with words through ongoing exposure to a variety of poetic forms, poet biographies, and 19th century poems.

Placement & Combining Tips

Poetry Reading: Grade 7

Students in Grades 5-8 can easily be combined for these lessons as all grades use nearly the same texts this year, although Grades 7-8 read additional selections and have corresponding composition assignments. Poetry lessons are also an integral part of the whole Literature program, so look at both literature and poetry selections together when placing students.

Poetry Study: Grade 7

☐ Some of the poems are given as links or PDFs. You may want to print those out.

☐ Make sure the student has a Commonplace Book to write down any poems they especially enjoy. You will want to remind them to do that during poetry time, or set another time in the afternoon to do that.

Poetry: Grade 7

How To Teach

Introduce

Tell something about the poet or the kind of poem or fable to prepare students. Remember that poems are like paintings—they not only convey ideas, they create an experience with the sound of words, the way the words are arranged, and the emotions, thoughts, and images they evoke.

Read

Read the poem aloud in order to hear the sounds and meter. Have students read it aloud as well as it is helpful to hear poetry read by different voices. Try to read paying attention to the punctuation as well as the line breaks to get the sense of the poem.

Discuss

Allow students to share any thoughts or connections. What are your impressions of the poem? Talk about anything that stood out to you: the images, ideas, words, phrases, sounds, or even physical look of the poem. What kinds of things is the poem about?

Reread

Read (or have the student read) the poem again.

Connect

Students may choose to add poems to their Commonplace Book or mark them to copy later.

Term 1

WEEK 1 ☐ 20m Poetry Study: Grade 7 - Lesson 1

☐ Materials: What Is Poetry?

→ INTRO

What makes something a poem? Let's explore this question in our book by British poet, Poet Laureate (2007-2009), and author Michael Rosen.

→ READ, NARRATE, & DISCUSS

Poetry Can Suggest Things Ch.1 p.1-6

- Rosen writes, "They don't try to give us answers. They leave us to do a lot of the figuring out." Read the poem below and ask questions about it and what it might be saying. You don't have to know the answers.

"The Listeners"

By Walter De La Mare

'Is there anybody there?' said the Traveller,
Knocking on the moonlit door;
And his horse in the silence champed the grasses
Of the forest's ferny floor:
And a bird flew up out of the turret,
Above the Traveller's head:
And he smote upon the door again a second time;
'Is there anybody there?' he said.
But no one descended to the Traveller;
No head from the leaf-fringed sill
Leaned over and looked into his grey eyes,
Where he stood perplexed and still.
But only a host of phantom listeners
That dwelt in the lone house then
Stood listening in the quiet of the moonlight
To that voice from the world of men:
Stood thronging the faint moonbeams on the dark stair,
That goes down to the empty hall,
Harkening in an air stirred and shaken
By the lonely Traveller's call.
And he felt in his heart their strangeness,
Their stillness answering his cry,
While his horse moved, cropping the dark turf,
'Neath the starred and leafy sky;
For he suddenly smote on the door, even Louder, and lifted his head:—
'Tell them I came, and no one answered,
That I kept my word,' he said.
Never the least stir made the listeners,
Though every word he spake
Fell echoing through the shadowiness of the still house
From the one man left awake:
Ay, they heard his foot upon the stirrup,
And the sound of iron on stone,
And how the silence surged softly backward,
When the plunging hoofs were gone.

→ READ, NARRATE, & DISCUSS

Introduction, Couplet p.8-11

Read the poem and the definition of that type of poem, and then reread the poem and tell how it follows or departs from that rule.

- How does the picture in the corner relate to the poetic form?
- Can you think of any famous couplets? Hint: Think of nursery rhymes.

→ WRITE

Put the term couplet and its definition in your notebook. You will be adding to this list each week. You should keep your notebook handy to look for these poetic devices as you read daily poetry.

WEEK 1 5m Poetry Reading: Grade 7 - Lesson 2

Materials: Over the River and Through the Woods

→ NOTE

You will usually spend one week reading the poems from ~5 pages (depending on the size of the illustrations and length of poems). You can pick 1-3 to read each day and reread them as much as you like. Poetry is made to be read many times. Lessons give some ideas for discussing a particular poem, but those are only suggestions. You'll also focus particularly on getting to know the poet Rabindranath Tagore in Term 1, Pauline Johnson in Term 2, and Paul Laurence Dunbar in Term 3. Feel free to use the index of the book to look up other poems by poets you particularly like.

→ INTRO

Almost all our poems we'll read this year were written from 1800-1900AD (the time period you'll learn about in many of your other lessons as well). So as you read, imagine children like you listening to these same poems about 200 years ago!

Let's start by reading a poem that reminds us to enjoy (and not overthink) the poems we'll read this year.

p. 31-36 Chapter: Growing Things

Pick and choose poems from these pages over the week. (Read one time, discuss, and then reread the poems.)

★ TEACHER NOTE

Optional: Read the Introduction and share information with students throughout the year.

Note: The "Holidays" chapter of Over the River and Through the Woods is not scheduled until term 3. Feel free to also read from that chapter during Thanksgiving, Christmas, New Years, etc.

WEEK 1 5m Poetry Reading: Grade 7 - Lesson 3

Materials: Over the River and Through the Woods

→ INTRO

Our poem today is by Paul Lawrence Dunbar. He was one of the first Black Americans to earn a living as a writer and he inspired many other writers after him. He also became friends with Orville Wright and his brother Wilbur (who you may remember as the inventors of the airplane)! The Wright brothers owned a printing press and published Dunbar's first writings.

- Do you notice how the seedling starts talking in the poem? Have you ever heard a seedling talk? Of course not! Poets sometimes imagine that things like plants or animals can talk to help us think about them in new ways. The fancy word for this is "personification." Do you notice any other examples of the seed doing things only people normally do?

You'll read an interesting biography about Paul Laurence Dunbar in term 2 that includes several more of his poems.

"Feelings" by Charlotte Perkins Gilman on p.31.

WEEK 1 5m Poetry Reading: Grade 7 - Lesson 4

Materials: Crescent Moon

→ INTRO

Rabindranath Tagore was born in 1861 in Calcutta, India, and grew up in a family that loved art, music, and ideas. He was a poet, short-story writer, composer, playwright, and painter who spent his life creating in many different ways. In 1913, he became the first non-European writer to be awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature. He also composed the national anthems for both India and Bangladesh, making his words a lasting part of two nations. Once a week this term, we'll explore poems by Rabindranath Tagore exploring themes like mothers, children, and nature.

WEEK 2 5m Poetry Reading: Grade 7 - Lesson 6

Materials: Over the River and Through the Woods

→ INTRO

Our poet today is Ina Coolbrith. She was born Josephine Smith. Her uncle Joseph Smith was founder of the Mormon church and her father (who died when she was just a few months old) was a church leader, though she concealed this most of her life. Her ties to the church were severed in childhood when her mother remarried a non-Mormon and they moved to California to follow the gold rush. She published her first poems as a teenager and worked for over two decades as a librarian, encouraging the writing careers of others. She became California's first poet laureate in 1915.

→ READ & DISCUSS

p. 50 "In Blossom Time" by Ina Coolbrith

- "In Blossom Time" is written in quatrain, meaning each verse contains exactly four lines. Sometimes a whole poem is written in quatrain as in this poem, and sometimes just part of the poem uses this structure. Quatrains usually have a specific rhyme structure. In this poem, the structure is ABCB, meaning that the words ending the second and fourth lines rhyme (B) but the first (A) and third lines (C) do not. Quatrains can have other rhyme structures such as AABB or ABBA.

Extra Helping: Ina Coolbrith bio

WEEK 2 5m Poetry Reading: Grade 7 - Lesson 7

Materials: Over the River and Through the Woods

→ READ & DISCUSS

p. 45 "The Johnny Cake" Author Unknown

- "The Johnny Cake" has three lines per stanza, which is called a tercet. The pace of a tercet is often slower than a couplet or quatrain. What is the rhyme scheme?

p. 44 Read "To Make A Prairie" by Emily Dickinson.

- Notice "To Make A Prairie" is both very brief and uses an unconventional AAABB rhyme structure. Why might Dickinson have chosen this for her subject? Note that reverie means to daydream or be lost in imagination.

★ TEACHER NOTE

"The Johnny Cake" rhyme scheme is ABB.

Poetry Can Be Symbolic, Poetry Can Be Personal Ch.1 p.20-27

- Rosen said that "Tennyson has turned the eagle into a person and then into a symbol of power" (p.23). Giving animals or things feelings, ideas, and thoughts so they can behave in ways people behave is called personification. Read the poem "The Oven Bird" by Robert Frost. What kinds of feelings and thoughts is he giving to the bird? The oven bird's song is "teacher, teacher, teacher." Could the bird be teaching us a lesson?

Tyger Tyger, burning bright,
In the forests of the night;
What immortal hand or eye,
Could frame thy fearful symmetry?

In what distant deeps or skies.
Burnt the fire of thine eyes?
On what wings dare he aspire?
What the hand, dare seize the fire?

And what shoulder, & what art,
Could twist the sinews of thy heart?
And when thy heart began to beat.
What dread hand? & what dread feet?

What the hammer? what the chain,
In what furnace was thy brain?
What the anvil? what dread grasp.

WEEK 3 5m Poetry Reading: Grade 7 - Lesson 10

Materials: Over the River and Through the Woods

→ READ & DISCUSS

p. 58 "Give Me The Splendid Sun" by Walt Whitman. We'll learn more about Walt Whitman later in the year.

- What examples of alliteration (repeated sounds) and/or repetition (repeated words) can you find in this poem?
- The poem in our book leaves out some lines. The verse ends like this:
These demanding to have them, (tired with ceaseless excitement,
and rack'd by the war-strife,
These to procure incessantly asking, rising in cries from my heart,
While yet incessantly asking still I adhere to my city,
Day upon day and year upon year O city, walking your streets,
Where you hold me enchain'd a certain time refusing to give me up,
Yet giving to make me glutt'd, enrich'd of soul, you give me forever faces;
(O I see what I sought to escape, confronting, reversing my cries,
I see my own soul trampling down what it ask'd for.)
- This poem was written during the Civil War. In fact, Whitman volunteered as a nurse caring for wounded soldiers, and the experience inspired some of his most powerful poems. Knowing this, how does the line about being "rack'd by the war-strife" impact Whitman's longing for peaceful nature?

★ TEACHER NOTE

The full poem is split into two distinct parts — the first longing for nature and solitude, the second embracing the city. However, the second part does include content that may not be suitable for your students, so it is not included in the book or the lesson.

COMPOSITION PROMPT:

Knowing of Walt Whitman's experience as a Civil War nurse, how does the line about being "rack'd by the war-strife" impact Whitman's longing for peaceful nature?

p. 59 "A Day" Emily Dickinson

- We previously read Emily Dickinson's "To Make A Prairie" (p. 44) which used an unconventional rhyme structure. "A Day" includes a more traditional quatrain (four line verse) and rhyme structure. Can you identify what that rhyme structure is?

"A Day" rhyme scheme is ABCB.

John Greenleaf Wittier is known as a passionate abolitionist opposing slavery long before the Civil War, a prolific writer, and a friend to several other famous writers. During his lifetime, he became one of America's most popular poets. He also ran for Congress twice, and remained involved in politics throughout his life. He spent his later years writing about religion, nature, and country life. He moved in a remarkable circle of friends that included abolitionist Frederick Douglass, poets Ralph Waldo Emerson and Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, and novelist Mark Twain.

You may already recognize Louisa May Alcott as the author of Little Women, but she is also recognized as a poet. Growing up in Concord, Massachusetts, her family was neighbors and friends with writers and poets Ralph Waldo Emerson, Henry David Thoreau, and Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, all of whom influenced her love of writing from an early age. She wrote novels, short stories, and poetry that often drew on her own life and the social causes she cared about, including abolition and women's rights. Her poetry also often reflected the Transcendentalist love of nature, finding meaning and beauty in the natural world.

★ TEACHER NOTE

This poem uses an ABCB rhyme scheme in the first 8 lines, but then changes to an AABCCB scheme in the refrain (the last 6 lines). This creates a "bouncing" effect much like bees bouncing from flower to flower. The poem almost sound like a song or hymn when read aloud.

p. 79 "The Lady-Bug And the Ant" by Lydia Sigourney

- The Ant notices the Lady-Bug's mockery but simply keeps walking "at the same industrious pace." What does this tell us about the Ant's character? Why might the poet have chosen not to have the Ant respond with words?
- What is the lesson the Lady-Bug learns? The poem ends without telling us what happens to the Lady-Bug when winter arrives. Why do you think the poet left this part out?
- This poem was written for children in 1836. Do you think its message still applies today? Can you think of modern examples that reflect the same ideas?

Helen Hunt Jackson experienced many hardships in her life. She turned to writing to help her through her grief and went on to publish poetry, children's books, and travel writing. Emily Dickinson spent almost her whole life in Amherst, Massachusetts, rarely leaving her family home. She was a serious gardener who grew all kinds of flowers and plants, and you can see her love of nature all over her poems, which are full of flowers, bees, and changing seasons that she observed right in her own backyard. Even though she only published a small handful of poems while she was alive, she secretly wrote nearly 1,800 of them, and most weren't discovered until after she died in 1886. Today she's considered one of the greatest American poets. Imagine her going back and forth between her garden and her writing desk, getting inspired by everything she saw growing around her.

→ READ & DISCUSS

p. 125 "In the Garden" by Emily Dickinson

- The poem is titled "In the Garden," yet the garden itself is never really described. Why might Dickinson have chosen that title?
- In the third stanza Dickinson uses an em dash -- some consider this her signature style! The dashes in her poems create pauses and make the reader slow down. These em dashes are often left out of her poems when they are reprinted. (Unfortunately, they were left out of many of her poems in this book). Note that many people today consider the use of em dashes a sign that something was written by AI (such as ChatGPT)!

American poet Laura E. Richards had pretty impressive parents! Her mother was Julia Ward Howe, who wrote "Battle Hymn of the Republic," and her father ran the Perkins Institution for the Blind. She followed in her family's accomplished footsteps by writing nearly a hundred books, becoming a pioneer of nonsense poetry for kids, and one of her stories was even turned into a movie. She and her sister won the Pulitzer Prize for Biography for a book they wrote about their famous mother, making them the first women ever to win that award.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox grew up on a farm in Wisconsin, started writing poetry around age eight, and was widely published in magazines by the time she was a teen! She became one of the most widely read American poets of her era. She wrote nearly 40 books of poetry and prose including the famous lines "Laugh, and the world laughs with you; weep, and you weep alone", which she wrote after comforting a grieving widow on a train. She was also a passionate advocate for animal rights, and this topic came up in several of her poems like "The Hen's Complaint".

→ READ & DISCUSS

p. 145-146 "The Hen's Complaint" by Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

- "The Hen's Complaint" uses rhyming couplets. This is when two lines rhyme, usually have the same number of syllables, and usually form a complete sentence or thought. It creates a very "sing song" cadence that you'll find used everywhere from Dr. Seuss to Shakespeare! We'll learn more about these in a later lesson.

Eugene Field was an American poet, journalist, and humorist who built a remarkable career working his way through newspapers across the Midwest, eventually becoming one of the most widely read columnists in the United States. Known as "The Children's Poet," he wrote more than a dozen volumes of poetry and created some of the most beloved children's poems in American literature. His writing was deeply personal, drawing on memories of his New England childhood, his marriage, and the joys of raising a large family. He claimed to be terrible with money and had all his earnings sent directly to his wife to manage.

Emily Pauline Johnson was born to a Mohawk chief and an English mother, growing up on the Six Nations Reserve in Ontario. She was educated at home where she was immersed in both English literary traditions and Mohawk oral storytelling and developed a love for poetry. At a time when Indigenous peoples regularly faced discrimination, she was raised to value her dual heritage. She turned to writing and performing after her father's death to help support her family, traveling across Canada for 17 years. The first half of each of her shows was performed in Indigenous dress and the second half in an English gown, embodying the two cultures that made her who she was. She published her work under both "E. Pauline Johnson" and her Mohawk name, "Tekahionwake."

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow was born in Portland, Maine in 1807 and published his first poem at just 13 years old. After college, he became a professor at Harvard and could speak eight languages, which helped make his poetry rich with ideas and stories from around the world. He became the most popular American poet of his time, writing famous works like "Paul Revere's Ride" and "The Song of Hiawatha". Some of his phrases (like "ships that pass in the night") became so well known that people still use them today without even knowing Longfellow wrote them. →INTRO

Walt Whitman grew up in Brooklyn, New York, left school at 11 to go to work, and went on to become one of the most important poets in American history. He self-published his famous poetry collection Leaves of Grass in 1855, which broke all the rules with its bold, free-flowing style and he kept revising it his whole life. During the Civil War he volunteered as a nurse caring for wounded soldiers, and the experience inspired some of his most powerful poems. His influence has never faded, and his idea that poetry should sound like real people talking about real life continues to shape American writing to this day.

You might not know her name, but you definitely know her work. Sarah Josepha Hale wrote "Mary Had a Little Lamb" and is also the woman most responsible for making Thanksgiving a national holiday! Born in New Hampshire in 1788, she turned to writing after her husband died young, leaving her with five children to support. She went on to publish poetry, novels, and essays throughout her life. She became the first female editor of an American magazine, using her platform to champion women's education and employment at a time when very few women had access to either. She spent 17 years writing letters to five different presidents lobbying for a national Thanksgiving holiday, and finally succeeded in 1863 when President Lincoln made it official!

Christina Moody was a young African American poet who did something truly remarkable; she published her own book of poetry called A Tiny Spark, when she was just sixteen years old! Her poems were bold and brave for their time, tackling big questions like what it really means to be Black in America and the complicated feelings of pledging allegiance to a country that didn't treat all of its people equally. The book is incredibly rare today, with only a handful of copies known to exist in the entire world. Not much is known about Christina's life beyond this one extraordinary book, but she was a courageous and talented young woman who deserves to be remembered.

Fenton Johnson was born in 1888 into one of Chicago's wealthiest African American families and attended top universities like the University of Chicago and Columbia. He wrote bold, free-verse poems about what life was really like for African Americans in the city, which was groundbreaking for his time. He even started his own literary magazines to help get new voices heard. He's considered one of the key figures who helped set the stage for the Harlem Renaissance, the incredible explosion of African American art, music, and literature that took off in the 1920s. He also wrote short stories, essays, and plays.

Robert Frost is one of the most famous poets in American history, but his road to success was anything but smooth. He dropped out of college twice, worked as a chicken farmer, and had barely been published until he was almost 40! Desperate for a fresh start, he packed up his whole family and sailed to England in 1912. British publishers loved his writing, and he came back to America a celebrity. He went on to win four Pulitzer Prizes, and wrote some of the most quoted lines in the English language.

Harriet McEwen Kimball was a poet and hymn writer from Portsmouth, New Hampshire. She was known in her day as "The Poetess of the Church". She was home educated by her mother, who was described as cultured and accomplished. She started writing poetry at a young age with her parent's encouragement and went on to publish several collections of deeply religious poetry and hymns that ended up in church songbooks all across the country. John Greenleaf Whittier grew up on a farm in Massachusetts in the early 1800s, where his love of reading sparked a passion for writing poetry. His sister secretly sent one of his poems to a newspaper, which kicked off his whole career. Whittier became one of the loudest voices against slavery in America, even when it was dangerous to do so. He helped found the American Anti-Slavery Society and signed the Anti-Slavery Declaration of 1833. After slavery was abolished, he wrote cozy, heartfelt poems about New England life and became one of the most beloved poets in the country.

We learned about Henry Wadsworth Longfellow earlier this year, and today we will read his poem "Christmas Bells". This popular poem was set to music pretty early on and has been recorded many times over the years. Listen to the version below if time allows.

Longfellow wrote this poem in 1863 at one of the lowest points of his life. His wife had recently died in a tragic accident, and his son had just been wounded fighting in the Civil War. When he heard church bells ringing on Christmas morning, he was struck by the contrast between their message of peace and the suffering around him. That tension became his poem "Christmas Bells."

When the poem was set to music in 1872, the stanzas referencing the Civil War were removed and the title changed to "I Heard The Bells On Christmas Day". Today millions of people sing the carol every holiday season.

James Russell Lowell was born in 1819 in Cambridge, Massachusetts. He graduated from Harvard but was banned from the graduation ceremonies for breaking the rules! During his suspension, he stayed with a reverend in Concord where he met poets Ralph Waldo Emerson and Henry David Thoreau, though his relationship with Thoreau would later sour. He skipped a career in law to pursue writing instead. His wife Maria strongly opposed slavery and pushed him toward more active involvement in the abolitionist cause. The couple gave their own money to help people escaping enslavement, even when times were tough financially. In 1849 he contributed toward purchasing a slave's freedom, writing, "if my poems were more popular my gifts should be larger." Lowell also joined the Boston Vigilance Committee, a group that provided shelter, clothing, money, and safe passage to slaves seeking freedom on the Underground Railroad. Lowell became the first editor of the Atlantic Monthly, and even served as U.S. ambassador to Spain and Great Britain.

Oliver Wendell Holmes was born in Cambridge, Massachusetts. He became a professor of anatomy at Harvard Medical School and was eventually made its dean, a position he held until 1882. He was also one of the "Fireside Poets," beloved for writing poetry that families could enjoy together. His most famous poem, "Old Ironsides," helped save the historic warship USS Constitution from being scrapped by the Navy. His son was Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr., who became an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. Holmes Jr. graduated from Harvard in 1861 right as the Civil War was breaking out and enlisted in the Union Army. He was wounded three times, and his father wrote a famous essay about frantically searching for his son after the Battle of Antietam.

Lucy Larcom was born in 1824 in Beverly, Massachusetts, the ninth of ten children. She loved books from a very early age and read everything she could find. According to her autobiography, she wrote and self-published her own poetry collections at just seven years old! When her father died and her family needed money, she went to work in a cotton mill at age eleven, but she never stopped writing. She grew up to become a well-known poet, teacher, and author whose words are still remembered today.

William Oland Bourne was a writer, minister, and helper of others who lived during the time of the Civil War. When soldiers were wounded in battle and lost their arms, he created a special newsletter called The Soldier's Friend to support them. Bourne even organized left-handed handwriting contests for veterans who had lost their right arms. Because of his work standing up for people with disabilities, he is considered a pioneer in disability rights. He also wrote poetry, books of fables, and stories for children.

James Whitcomb Riley was a poet from Greenfield, Indiana, who loved making up rhymes even as a little kid. His very first poems were valentines he made for his friends! He skipped out on school as much as he could, preferring to wander outside and read on his own. He worked all kinds of odd jobs before becoming famous as a writer. He wrote about everyday people and the Indiana countryside in the way people actually talked, earning the nicknames "the Hoosier Poet" and "the Children's Poet." His best-known poems include "Little Orphant Annie" (which we read earlier) and "The Raggedy Man".
